

Dr. Nitish Dogra, Member Secretary UCHAI Advisory committee and convener. He is a physician, physiologist and public health specialist by training with a Master of Public Health (MPH) degree from the Johns Hopkins University, United States. Based out of New Delhi, he has over a decade's experience related to environmental health with a strong focus on studying the health impacts of climate change. He was awarded the Fulbright-Nehru Environmental Leadership Program Fellowship by the US State Department and the Government of India for work related to climate change attributable burden of disease in India. Dr. Dogra has worked extensively with the World Health Organization (WHO). In August, 2014 he delivered, on request, an invited commentary at the Conference on Health and Climate organized by WHO Headquarters, Geneva; the first such global-level ministerial meet in this area.