

A Delhi institute that trains people in health management research

Dr Sutapa Neogi, Director,
IIHMR, Delhi

Divya Agarwal, Associate
Dean, Academics,
IIHMR, Delhi

The COVID-19 pandemic has shown that Health Management education is vital. "International Institute of Health Management Research (IIHMR) was the first institution to start health and hospital management education in the country. It specialises in health management, hospital management and health information technology," says Dr Sutapa Neogi, Director, IIHMR, Delhi.

Since its inception in 2008, it has emerged as one of the premier knowledge institutions in India, focussing on national and international healthcare sectors. The Post Graduate Program in Hospital and Health Management at IIHMR, Delhi, is set to improve management practices in healthcare and related systems. Dr Sutapa adds, "Simultaneously, it is also developing the requisite management knowledge and skills in healthcare managers. The infrastructure and facilities available here are at par with the international institutes and are well-equipped to meet all the academic and administrative requirements of the institution."

Keeping COVID safety measures in mind, they have tailored their teaching and learning processes. "We have a multi-disciplinary faculty team playing a vital role in pushing the students towards the path of success. Our faculty members are capable of conducting research programmes, acquire the latest knowledge and information by participating in international programmes, and remain better equipped to provide a global perspective to students," she says.

Website:
<https://www.iihmrdelhi.edu.in/admission/apply-to-pgdhm-2021-2023>

In NEWS

Times of India
29 May 2021